MR. RAYNER'S SPEECH. Hon, Isadore Rayner with a good deal of flourish Tuesday night formally opened his gubernatorial canvass in Music Hall, Baltimore. His speech on that occasion was a bugle blast of no mean pretensions. Indeed Mr. Rayner is an orator and thousands went there knowing they would be entertained with one of Mr. Rayner's best efforts. Mr. Rayner did entertain his audience and he was ably assisted by ex-Governor Whyte and Mr. Edgar II. Gans. He struck out fearlessly if not wildly in the "interests of the people," not forgetting to pay his respects to Mr. Gorman, just for what reason Mr. Rayner did not clearly state. In a general way he tried to make his large and enthusiastic audience believe they were serving out a Russian sentence to Siberia under the present Democratic management, that in some way the State Democracy was being led about with a collar on its neck by a few leaders, and that there had never been such a thing as a primary election.

Mr. Rayner said he was appealing to the voters direct and denounced the other leaders, who did not agree with him, in unmeasured terms.

Admitting that Mr. Rayner made a telling speech it was somewhat defective supposed to be still a burning question in our State-reassessment. He said, how-

"Upon the subject of a new assessment of the property of this State I would endeavor to carry out the will of the people of Maryland, and if, speaking through their representatives, they demand a system that will accomplish the the credit of the State in cash is large; constitutional purpose of fairly and hon estly reassessing the property of this State, my opinion is that their demand must be heeded and their will should not be thwarted. I think that I can be safely trusted upon this question."

This is very good as far as it goes but it falls far short of measuring up to the present position and antecedents of Thomas G. Hayes on this question. And it is feared that the question whether or not Mr. Rayner is in the interest of the tax-dodgers of Baltimore city and else where in the State, will remain open There is danger also of criticism being made, after sober reflection on the part of the people, that Mr. Rayner indulged in glittering generalities and that his charges were not specific enough. There was no complaint about the credit of the State or the financial condition of Baltimore city, both so long managed by the leaders he so unsparingly denounced. Only the people had been wearing a yoke and didn't know it.

Mr. Hayes is not the orator that Mr. Rayner is but he may be just as eloquently heard from when he commences to discuss the real issues of the hour. His ideas have more than once moved the people and it is a question whether the attention of the people, even by so powerful appeal as was made by Mr. Rayner, can be diverted to the contemplation of issues that seem to have no substance or are not founded in fact

The ruling passion with many Democrats in the state is the destruction of Mr. Gorman. But should not even Mr. Gorman be at least held in abeyance to see what the out come of the tariff law, he is charged with, will be, or allow time to test his relations with the Demoeratic party? Mr. Gorman is in good health and may live to render the country another signal service as he did in 1890, and though his adherents may be turned down it doesn't alter the fact that the state will need a good leader to stem the tide of Republicanism which threatens to overwhelm Democratic Maryland. If Mr. Rayner can fill the the older States would probably be able bill we are with him.

Marshall E. Price Thursday was found guilty of the murder of Miss Sallie F. Dean, near Harmony, Caroline county, on March 26. The verdict gives intense satisfaction to the people there who are only too anxious for an opportunity to visit summary vengeance upon the prisoner.

Lincoln's Death. New York World. The death of Abraham Lincoln on the 15th of April, 1865, by the pistol of the assassin was followed by such consequences to his fellow-countrymen that they may well consider its anniversary one of the saddest days in American history. It is, perhaps, the only case in all history in which the death of an individual has been an irreparable loss fighting were getting ready to live together under the new conditions. The pacific adjustment of all questions.

He was killed, and the buliet that ended his life started a new civil war—a strife in politics hardly less percicious and bitter than the strife in arms just ending. Deprived of the authority of his commanding influence, of the strength of his popularity, of the restraint of his judicial and temperate mind, the Republican party was forced by the United States Labor Commissioner Wright should be warned by some friendly voice (says the New York Post) that he is in danger of losing his office. He is uttering opinions which deeply wound the sensibilities of a large body of voters, and no man who does that should hold an appointive office in this country. Speaking of the business and industrial outlook, he predicts that the year "is to be one of continually increasing prosperity." That is a direct series of Republican State conventions and hundreds of able editors. All of them have told us that there will be nothing but woe upon woe for this devoted land until a Republican President is elected. Even if Mr. Wright knew the additional advantage of being that they were deceivers, he should have kept still and not gone out of his way to speak evil of them. But this might have one's sense of humor. been forgiven had not the shameless man added to his predictious a lot of facts. He says, in an evident and deliberate attempt to offend thousands of our profoundest newspaper thinkers:

"In the past the mill-owner and manube any labor troubles this year. The gratiate themselves into the favor of the prospect of steadily resuming business | Baltimore theatre-goers. does away with all labor trouble clouds.' Increased wages with protection gone, prosperity and contentment under a low ered tariff, are as outrageous and insult ing as advancing prices with the gold standard crushing the life out of us. Let Commissioner Wright be removed at once. He was not put in office to furnish facts of this kind.

Reat This!! The successful effort of the Democratic party in Maryland in behalf of all economical and honest administration of the Government is, in many respects without a precedent in the history of our sister States. Its record in Maryland is one of which every Democrat may well be proud. Among the many acts which bespeak its devotion to the public welfare and its economical, wise management of the finances of the State, may be given the fact that today the salaries of the Treasury officials are paid by the interest received from the banks on the current expenses of the State Govern-

There are few if, any business firms in our States which can say that from their monthly balance remaining on deposit in bank they receive one cent of interest: yet the Democratic party by its manage-In that he kept rather shy of what was | ment, has from this interest alone paid, and is paying, the salaries of its principal State officers.

In 1892 the General Assembly of Maryland, with an insignificant minority of Republicans on the recommendation of the Finance and Ways and Means Committees, composed exclusively of Democrats passed the following resolu-

"The average balance in the banks to the committee think if a safe bank or banks could be found which could pay some interest to the State, of the monthy balance denosited to the credit of the State it would be wise and would yield to the State a revenue on its deposits. The Treasury officials at once acted on the recommendation and the State Comptroller in his report for 1895, informs the people of the State that "the sum received during the last fiscal year from that source (interest on monthly balances) is more than sufficient to pay the salaries of the Treasury officials.

Balto. Telegram. Opening Headquarters. Chairman Hattersley W. Talbott of the Democratic State Central Committee came to Baltimore Wednesday and opened the party headquarters in Rooms 114 and 121 at the Carrollton Hotel. Mr. Spencer Watkins, secretary and treasurer of the committee, and the other employes of the headquarters came with Mr. Talbott, and the rooms were soon placed in order and the active work preparatory to opening the present campaign began. Chairman Talbott has appointed Mr. D. G. Luckett of Montgomery county his private secretary, and Mr. George W. Feelemyer of Baltimore county will be assistant again, as he has been for many years. Mr. Christian Bitters of Baltinore was reappointed messenger—a position he has held during three or iour campaigns.

The headquarters will be open every lay, except Sunday, from now until after the election in November. Either Mr. l'albott or Mr. Watkins will be on hand every day, and the work of making the preliminary preparations for the can paign will be carried on with yigor. The Executive Committee, compose of Messrs. Luther II. Gadd, George L. Vanbibber, James Bond, I. Freeman Rasin, Thomas H. Hunt and L. Victor Baughman, will be called together later in the season to consult about the campaign, and the new committee of 10 on reorganization will also be called together from time to time to consider party affairs.

The Doom of the Small Town.

Springfield Republican: A writer in one of the current maga zines pronounces the doom of the small town. Between 1880 and 1890 the five States of Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Illinois and Iowa gained largely in population as a whole, but more than onehalf the townships show a loss. None of to present any very different result. The tendency of population is all toward the cities in the West, as well as the East and more markedly in the more wealthy and progressive sections than elsewhere But this does not necessarily mean the doom of the small town, village or com munity. The great cheapening of rapid transit since the application of electricity as a motive power and its greater availability as a means of communica tion between town and town must operate materially to modify the drift of population.

DISEASES OF BEES.

Like Other Communities.

During the last few years, thanks chiefly to the enterprise of the British Beekeepers' association, the keeping of bees has made great progress in this country and it is now rare to see the humblest cot tage without its two or three hives, while in the course of a railway journey one may often see a large field dotted over with the elaborate structures which serve the modern bee for a residence, all of them carefully facing the east so that their inmates should be waked by the first rays of the enn, and surrounded with other fields in which honey producing blooms reduce their labor to a minimum.

With the increase of bees, however, has come the sprend of disease in much more rapid proportion. The old method used to be to keep the bees in a straw skip, and when they had filled it with comb at the end of the season to suffocate the entire community with sulphur and appropriate the results of its industry. This of course was not only a cruel, but an extremely wasteful method. Nowadays, with the modern frame hive, the honey is taken without disturbing the bees, and they are carefully packed up and preserved during the winter and even fed if they run short of food.

The modern hive, however, is subject to the beekeeper's principal trouble—namely, what is called "foul brood." Nobody knows exactly what this is, or how it is produced, but it takes the form in the first place of a discoloration of the combs, and afterward of a complete putridity, which is equally patent to the eyes and the nose. It is extremely infectious, and as bees are constantly visiting one another's hives for predatory purposes, when it appears in a district it speedily spreads. It is said that when the beekeepers of Kent recently employed an expert to examine their hives, 109 were found to be diseased out of 307.—London Chronicle.

The most ancient family in France, i so far as the tracing back of the ancestry in an unbroken line is concerned, is the royal house of Bourbon, which goes back to Robert le Fort, in the year 861. Next in point of antiquity comes the Rohan family, which for the last century, however, has been settled in Austria, the so called Rohans in France being not really Robans, but merely Chabots, their only connection with the house of Roban being

A correspondent asks me why I have called Charlotte Bronte "a hysterical governess." But when or where did I ever write such nonsense about "the vestal of Haworth?" If I err not, the accomplished Shirley brought this charge against me in Good Words. I read it with amazement was a governess and expressed the usual regret for the unhappy lives which are too often lived in that underpaid and difficult One catches an echo of many laments in Miss Bronte's novels. Her materials are inevitably derived from her experience. But I find nothing about "hysterical goyerness." People have called Jeanne d'Are 'hysterical." Genius and hysterics have points of contact. But I did not even say that, as far as I am aware, and if I am to be accused of doing so by Shirley or any one else I must ask for documentary evidence. "No other is genuine." If the thing can be proved, I shall recant and burn my fagot; if it cannot be proved, perhaps the myth will be withdrawn. No-

The Catamaran.

The catamaran requires steering with a paddle through the raging surf, and, though the boatman may be frequently dashed out of the rude skiff by the vio lence of the waves, he leaps into his frail bark again with the efficiency of long practice, and the catamaran, flying over the crest of the great billows which threaten instant destruction, accomplishes the per-by marriage. Then comes the house of Narbonne Pelet, the head of which is the Due de Narbonne, who can trace his lineage back without interruption to the year 910. Of course, in making this assertion, I do not take into consideration the somewhat mythical claim of the Duke of Levis-Mirepoix to be descended in a direct and unbroken line from Jacob's son, Levi. He has among his family pictures one old painting in which the Holy Virgin is reppicted as uttering the words, "Couvrez resents an ancestor of the dukes of Levis-
